

PHAIDON, Cui Jie - Why I Paint, text/ Phaidon, November, 2016

PHAIDON

PHAIDON Φ

HOME BOOKS NEWS APPS EVENTS PHAIDON GIFTS

Search Store

Follow us f t in v

Cui Jie - Why I Paint

Exploring the creative processes of tomorrow's artists today - as featured in Vitamin P3

Cui Jie

SHARE THIS PAGE

- Tweet
- Follow @Phaidon

RELATED

Caragh Thuring - Why I Paint
Exploring the creative processes of tomorrow's artists today - as featured in Vitamin P3

ARTICLE TOOLS

- Print this page
- Bookmark this page
- Email link to a friend
- Share this page

A A

Cui Jie's paintings are largely based on her continuous study of the architectural landscape in the three cities in which she has lived: Shanghai, where she was born and grew up, Hangzhou, where she attended the National Art Academy, and Beijing, where she currently lives and works. She observed at first hand the outstanding transformation that urbanization in Chinese cities has brought about, drastically changing the cityscape, with a proliferation of buildings, high-rises and plazas being erected throughout.

Cui's paintings depict these urban architectural creations and presences, but from her distinct perspective. In her eyes, the sculptures that inhabit the different city squares appear superimposed on the buildings in the background. At some point, due to the effects of the depicted light, the surface of one merges with the surface of the other so that the sculpture becomes part of the architecture and the architecture part of the sculpture. Her large canvases present surreal architectural drawings, in which enlarged sculptures are grafted onto anonymous buildings found on city avenues, on street corners and in suburban areas. Here, the Vitamin P3-featured painter tells us what interests, inspires and spurs her on.

RELATED BOOK

Vitamin P3

Hardback | English

USD59.95

BUY NOW

Look Inside

YOU MAY ALSO LIKE

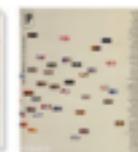

Vitamin P2

Paperback | English

USD39.95

BUY NOW

Look Inside

Vitamin P

Paperback | English

USD45.00

BUY NOW

Look Inside

Vitamin D2

Hardback | English

USD69.95

BUY NOW

Look Inside

Vitamin D

Paperback | English

USD39.95

BUY NOW

Look Inside

Tweets about @Phaidon

ABU Retweeted

Intermuse DesignMag
@intermusedmag

Notre sélection de livres de Phaidon
@Architecture et @Est-Intermuse.fr/news/inter-
seil... @phaidon_soma @Phaidon
@bookstore @EdParthenos

BKU I

Embed

View on Twitter

<http://www.phaidon.com/agenda/art/articles/2016/november/23/cui-jie-why-i-paint/>

LEO XU PROJECTS

RELATED

Sarah Thuring - Why I Paint
Exploring the creative processes of tomorrow's artists today - as featured in Vitamin P3

ARTICLE TOOLS

- Print this page
- Bookmark this page
- Email link to a friend
- Share this page

A - A

the architectural landscape in the three cities in which she has lived: Shanghai, where she was born and grew up, Hangzhou, where she attended the National Art Academy, and Beijing, where she currently lives and works. She observed at first hand the outstanding transformation that urbanization in Chinese cities has brought about, drastically changing the cityscape, with a proliferation of buildings, high-rises and plazas being erected throughout.

Cui's paintings depict these urban architectural creations and presences, but from her distinct perspective. In her eyes, the sculptures that inhabit the different city squares appear superimposed on the buildings in the background. At some point, due to the effects of the depicted light, the surface of one merges with the surface of the other so that the sculpture becomes part of the architecture and the architecture part of the sculpture. Her large canvases present surreal architectural drawings, in which enlarged sculptures are grafted onto anonymous buildings found on city avenues, on street corners and in suburban areas. Here, the Vitamin P3-featured painter tells us what interests, inspires and spurs her on.

Cui Jie - Worker Cultural Palace in Dongguan 2014, courtesy the artist and Leo Xu Projects, Shanghai

Who are you? Cui Jie. Born in Shanghai. Graduated from the Department of Oil Painting at China Academy of Art. Living and working in Beijing now.

What's on your mind right now? I'm thinking about the matter of sound in painting - the synaesthetic relationship between vision and hearing. I try to respond to Kandinsky's concept from another angle — not just connecting music with visual forms, but to generate sound directly. However, I don't want to pursue it as a separate theme, but wish to explore its possibility by incorporating it with architectural elements.

How do you get this stuff out? I study the texture of the surfaces of architectures under the sunlight, especially the reflective metallic walls exposed outside. I carefully examined the pattern and quality of these surfaces, but not with my eyes, since these reflections were too strong to look at straight. Instead I experienced a strong feeling when my eyes avoided the reflections. At that moment, I sense the potentials of hearing, or other way of bodily perception.

Cui Jie - Overpass at Shuang Jing Qiao, 2014, courtesy the artist and Leo Xu Projects, Shanghai

Vitamin P3

Look Inside

Vitamin P3
Hardback | English
USD88.95

BUY NOW

Look Inside

Vitamin D

Look Inside

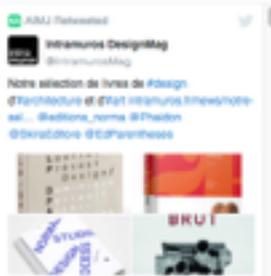

Vitamin D
Paperback | English
USD36.95

BUY NOW

Look Inside

Tweets about @Phaidon

Embed

View on Twitter

YIYI KUSAMA / AI WEIWEI / FERRAN ADRIA / STEVE MCCURRY / MARINA ABRAMOVIĆ / FRANCIS BACON / BRUCE NAUMAN / RICHARD PRINCE / TOM UNGERER / NAN GOLDIN / KATE SHEPHERD / JEFF KOONS / TAKASHI MURAKAMI / LOUISE BOURGEOIS / MARILYN MONTEGOMERY / LAWRENCE WEINER / ROBERT LONGO & many more

Buy the World's Best Contemporary Art, Online.

Artspace

China: The Cookbook

"The secrets of Chinese cooking have been demystified" in "an indispensable tool" and "comprehensive resource for any lover of Chinese cuisine"

BUY NOW >

<http://www.phaidon.com/agenda/art/articles/2016/november/23/cui-jie-why-i-paint/>

LEO XU PROJECTS

How does it fit together? I didn't set a specific subject or research project to start with, but simply observe the surroundings as a stroller living within the environment. Sometimes I stop to look at the colours of the buildings or to intentionally listen to the noises on the streets; other times I just notice certain appearances, their shapes, and the histories of their productions behind. A city is a living ecosystem, and things are all interweaved with one another in their own ways. In China, one can see many different "appropriation" styles - Russian, the Bauhaus, etc. - but I'm mostly interested in the influence of Japanese Metabolism on Asian modern architecture. Many buildings employ columns and circular roofs in China, which all results from the influence of Metabolism.

What brought you to this point? I still follow a quite Modernist way of creation methodology, which infiltrates my art education and life. Architecture is experiencing history just as human beings. My paintings can be seen as my reinterpretation and re-perception of history.

Cui Jie - Crane House #4 2015, courtesy the artist and Leo Xu Projects, Shanghai

Can you control it? To me, losing control is the norm. My initial goal and vision can easily get lost during the process. There are exceptions when I have an extraordinary result at the first round of painting. I tend to keep working on the canvas to cover the image, and sometimes another surprise occurs. If at the time I still remember the pre-set goal and thought, I would compare the two; but if I'm already lost, I would continue painting until I completely forget my purpose, then I start to think: when does it all end? The painting would be put aside for a while, until someday I come back to give it a brand new start. I may add several brushes to it, or suddenly realise that it is already a good painting. But nevertheless, everything would look afresh then.

Have you ever destroyed one of your paintings? Never. But I always have such burning desire, especially for the ones that do not belong to me anymore.

What's next for you, and what's next for painting? Recently I've become interested in Le Corbusier. I don't mean his architectural philosophy, but the ground that was broken by his and his clients' ideas and opinions. For now it's early stages and I don't yet know what might come from it.

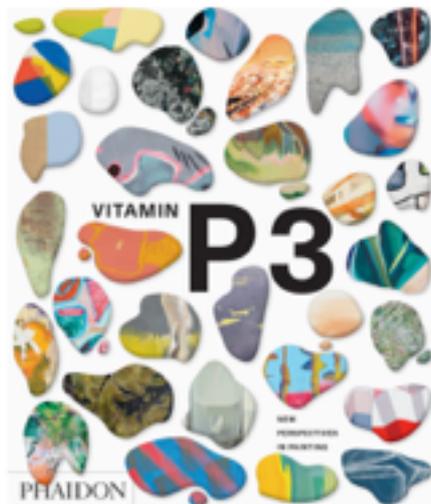

<http://www.phaidon.com/agenda/art/articles/2016/november/23/cui-jie-why-i-paint/>

Cui Jie - S House #1 2015, courtesy the artist and Leo Xu Projects, Shanghai

Vitamin P3 New Perspectives In Painting is the third in an ongoing series that began with Vitamin P in 2002 and Vitamin P2 in 2011. For each book, distinguished critics, curators, museum directors and other contemporary art experts are invited to nominate artists who have made significant and innovative contributions to painting. The series in general, and Vitamin P3 in particular, is probably the best way to become an instant expert on tomorrow's painting stars today.

Find out more about Vitamin P3 New Perspectives In Painting here. Check back for another Why I Paint interview with a Vitamin P3-featured artist soon. Finally, be sure to look out for Cui Jie in Art Basel Miami Beach's young artists section Nowa, where her gallery Leo Xu Projects will be showing a selection of her paintings.

The cover of Vitamin P3 New Perspectives In Painting

SHARE THIS PAGE

YOU MAY ALSO LIKE

<http://www.phaidon.com/agenda/art/articles/2016/november/23/cui-jie-why-i-paint/>