People in Shanghai have the pleasure of experiencing weightlessness this week as Argentinian artist Leandro Erlich brought his wildly popular project of grand illusion to the Jing'an Kerry Center in downtown Shanghai.

This project features a huge mirror staged at a 45-degree angle to reflect people on the ground. The horizontal print has been made so to resemble the facade of shikumen house, a traditional Shanghainese architectural style fusing Western and Chinese elements. As a result, a visual illusion is created as if the viewers are performing gravity-defying stunts.

The project is open to the Chinese public until this Friday.
