

The Huffington Post, Female Photographers Discuss The Real Anxieties of Being Women, Text/
Priscilla Frank, February 4 2016

Female Photographers Discuss The Real Anxieties Of Being Women | Huffington Post

22/09/2016 12:44

EDITION
US

INFORM • INSPIRE • ENTERTAIN • EMPOWER

NEWS POLITICS ENTERTAINMENT WELLNESS WHAT'S WORKING VOICES VIDEO ALL SECTIONS Q

ARTS & CULTURE

Female Photographers Discuss The Real Anxieties Of Being Women

Warning: This post contains nudity and may be inappropriate for work.

02/04/2016 10:18 am ET

2k f t p e m

Priscilla Frank f t
Arts Writer, The Huffington Post

JUNO CALYPSO, A DREAM IN GREEN, 2013

"A woman must continually watch herself," critic John Berger wrote in Ways of Seeing. "One might simplify this by saying: men act and women appear. Men look at women. Women watch themselves being looked at."

As a bona fide woman, I get the feeling. I've learned to both understand and subtly combat the way I envision myself looking to an outsider, when groggily preparing coffee first thing in the morning — hair disheveled, eyes at half mast. So many actions are subconsciously played back to me in my imagination as they are happening, as if I'm constantly watching the movie of my own life. In this way, women are intuitive image-makers, constantly creating and starring in their own ever-shifting visions.

A photography exhibition entitled "The Real Thing," featuring artists Juno Calypso, Natasha Carvana, Pixy Yijun Liao and Melanie Willhite, is dissecting the various ways that appearance and reality become entangled in art and life. Dealing with identity, relationships, gender and sexuality, the artists explore the alien peculiarities from a distinctly feminine point of view.

JUNO CALYPSO, 12 REASONS YOU'RE TIRED ALL THE TIME, 2013

http://www.huffingtonpost.com/entry/for-these-women-photographers-reality-is-best-served-with-a-little-artifice_us_56b26813e4b04f9b57d840eb

Page 1 of 11

London-based Jane Caplan transforms hotel bedrooms and pink tiled bathroom into dystopian landscapes. Amplifying the anxiety of priming oneself in surreal bedrooms, Caplan's photographs are part 20th-century photographer Francesca Woodman, part "The Beaches, Getting Ready, Sleep."

In her process, mirrors reflect the images of women into infinite selves, mimicking the scrutiny with which many of us examine ourselves. "I can trace my obsession with mirrors to when I used to take with my grandma's black vinyl mirror." Caplan explained to The Huffington Post. "I'd stick my face in it and close the panels around my face to create an infinite room of mirroring heads."

"From the age of 12 to 21, I developed an anxious regime of beauty rituals," Caplan continued. "Being young and literally unaware most of these took place in a bedroom or bathroom - the type of room I made all of my work in now. Preparation for an occasion could and would frequently begin three days in advance. Everything would be washed, plucked, deoiled and shaved. Layers of fake tan, butters and mousses would be applied, acrylic nails would be added, hair extensions and eyelashes glued in. It was a very hot and sticky process. By the end you'd feel like a slippery bronze ball attempting to walk on land."

SUBSCRIBE AND FOLLOW

Follow Jane Caplan on Instagram

Follow Jane Caplan on Facebook

Follow Jane Caplan on Twitter

Follow Jane Caplan on YouTube

Follow Jane Caplan on LinkedIn

Follow Jane Caplan on SoundCloud

My grandma always calls putting on makeup "putting her face on," alluding to the many ways women endure to become "themselves." Maybe it's this commitment to image-making or a daily task, Caplan suggests, that turns women into artists. "We're used to crafting something and are willing to put in work till we achieve what we want to see."

While Caplan's images are fantastical and uncanny, Netelady Consueco works in a documentary style, keenly photographing uncomprising details of her dates with married men. Consueco finds her smelting subjects on online dating sites designed for affair and lust.

Her love together is flawed that motivations for cheating. While some are purely sexual, many of the men express patterns of loneliness or alienation that lead them to infidelity.

Her photographs are presented like clues of a prime scene, capturing a pivotal encounter founded entirely on deceit. The husbands lie to their wives. The wives lie to her subjects. And yet, a certain authenticity rings through the images, captured in the moment.

Working somewhere between documentary and fiction is Play Lab, whose series 'Experimental Relationship' captures her and her partner in a variety of poses based loosely on real life. The premise of the series stems from Play's Chinese upbringing, in which the ideal romantic partner was an older, authoritative and protective figure. Now, collaborating with her partner Max, who is five years younger, Play toys with the expectations and realities of romantic partnerships.

In one image, Play acts as the protector while a naked Max clings to her neck, almost like a child. Her images replot the typical male/female relationship into its more nuanced iterations – the moment girlfriend is powerful, boyfriend is soft, girlfriend is scared, boyfriend is needy.

"The photographs in 'Experimental Relationship' are not a documentation of our real relationship," Play has confessed. "It's more as an idea exploration of my thoughts on relationships. Sometimes I'm trying to describe our relationship. Sometimes it's the things that would love to do but never really do it in real life."

Melanie Nishida, on the other hand, creates imaginary memories of romantic relationships in her series "Sleeping Beauties (The Box Under the Bed)." Exploring the ways photographic documents can supersede the real, Nishida meticulously crafts four vintage photos, complete with air-kissed personalized messages, fingerprints, glue stains, watermarks and other artificial imprints of time. The purposefully obscured objects conjure memories of concepts, narratives that never exist, while exploring the artistic always already attributed in romantic gestures.

For Play the four artists in the exhibit almost represent four distinct stages of a woman's life. "I think all of the four artists' work in the show are autobiographical in some way... First, there's

LEOXU PROJECTS

Female Photographers Showcase The New Wave of Being Women | Huffington Post

01/28/2016 12:32:11

Just's work as a single young woman. Then there's my work of being with somebody. And later it's Natalia's work of being after, in the end, there's Natalia's work on the aftermath of the relationship."

Together with the Calypso, Lash and Caruana construct distinct interconnections on a single theme, reality, in whatever mediated, constructed shape it may appear. "The Real Thing" is on view until February 07, 2016 at Powers Gallery in New York.

June Calypso

01/28/2016 12:32:11

01/28/2016 12:32:11

<http://www.huffpost.com/entry/female-artist-photographers-reality-in-art-01-28-16>

Page 4 of 17

LEO XU PROJECTS

Female Photographers Struggle To Get Noticed In Being Street / Wallpaper Post

2018.09.14 12:22

http://www.wallpaperpost.com/2018/09/14/1222/

Melanie Wilhelm

More photos: Melanie Wilhelm's work on Flickr

<http://www.wallpaperpost.com/2018/09/14/1222/> More photos: Melanie Wilhelm's work on Flickr

Page 3 of 11

LEO XU PROJECTS

Female Photographers Struggle To Get Accepted In Being Women - Hologram Post

000000000000

000000000000

000000000000

Female Photographers

000000000000

000000000000

LEOXU PROJECTS

Portrait Photographers Showcase The Best Moments Of Being Married | HuffPost Post

0000000000000000

www.huffpost.com/entry/.../photo-1234567890

www.huffpost.com/entry/.../photo-1234567890

http://www.huffpost.com/entry/.../photo-1234567890

Page 1 of 1

LEO XU PROJECTS

Female Photographers Struggle To Get Accused Of Being Women | HuffPost Post

2018-08-16 12:22

https://www.huffpost.com/entry/female-photographers-struggle-to-get-accused-of-being-women-1534411111

#Pop Life

https://www.huffpost.com/entry/female-photographers-struggle-to-get-accused-of-being-women-1534411111

Page 4 of 11

LEO XU PROJECTS

Female Photographers Struggle To Not Accuse Of Being Stolen | Huihuiyu Post

© 2020 LEO XU

The New York Times photo of a woman in a dress

The New York Times photo of a woman in a dress

From "Experimente Relationship" project

http://www.huihuiyupost.com/en/for-these-foreign-photographers-why-is-it-so-difficult-to-get-a-photo-of-a-woman-in-a-dress

Page 4 of 17

Female Photographers Struggle To Get Noticed (Or Being Noticed) | HuffPost Post

01/28/2016 12:21

From "Experiments in Intimacy" project

Also on HuffPost

20 Reasons Of Black History With One

Follow HuffPost on Snapchat!

More: Health Care Immigration The New York Times Education The New York Times

Support a contributor

Post Story

Misty Copeland Is A 21st-Century Queen In New Photography Book

Comments

YOU MAY LIKE

1,000,000 Have Adopted This New Way To Learn A Foreign Language

<http://www.huffpost.com/entry/female-photographers-struggle-to-get-noticed-with-a-lens-w/1611616>

Page 13 of 17